Journal of Peace & Diplomacy
Research Journal of Institute of Peace and Diplomatic Studies

- The Journal of Peace & Diplomacy (JPD) is published biannually by the Institute of Peace & Diplomatic Studies from Islamabad, Pakistan. The Journal's research papers will be abstracted in the International Political Science Abstracts of the International Association of Political Science in Paris, France.

Authors of the papers for JPD are requested to follow the following guidelines.

- Copyright: JPD does not accept manuscripts for review that are under review elsewhere, previously published or already committed for publication. All the data (figures, tables, quantitative analysis) in the article should have acknowledgement if reproduced.
- Review: All articles are independently refereed, but the editorial board is responsible for the final selection of the contents of the journal.
- Themes: The Journal invites manuscripts in broad field of Economic, Regional and International Politics, Security, Development and Environment in context of CPEC and OBOR. JPD is currently open for research papers and book reviews related but not limited to the above mentioned thematic areas.
- The Journal is also inclusive of comprehensive range of related fields like international relations, political science, theory and security, political economy, politics of energy, leadership psychology, modern history, international law, sociology, education, social anthropology, development studies, foreign policy and related fields.
- Submission: Authors are requested to submit their original articles electronically along with the hard copy through post mail to the Editor. The postal and email address/s is given as:
Electronic Submission: Publications@ipd.org.pk

Hard Copy Submission:

Editor, Journal of Peace & Diplomacy
4th Floor, Building 9, Shahrah-e-Jamhuriat,
G-5/2, Islamabad Pakistan.

- Length of Manuscript: Manuscripts must not be shorter than 4000 and not longer than 5000 words. The entire manuscript (including notes and references) must be double-spaced, MS World file (in New Time Roman font-12) with one-inch margins.

- Language: The articles must be in English (US/UK). The authors are requested to review their language (proofread) before sending it to the final submission. Editors reserve the right to edit the articles for brevity and better understanding of the text.
- Author's Profile/Introduction: The author must include his/ her full contact information (including email address, telephone number and institutional affiliation). JPD will only use information for editorial communications.
- Abstract: There must be an abstract of no more than 200-250 words. Papers without any abstract would not be accepted. The abstract should summarize the whole article, not just the approach or conclusions.
- Key Words: After abstract, write about 3 to 9 key words from research. That will give indexing and references should be listed.
- Tables and Figures: Placement of tables or figures should be cited in the text. The publisher will be responsible for placing artwork, tables or figures, as well as converting endnotes to footnotes.
- Writing Style:
Abbreviations can be used within the text according to internationally accepted conventions. Acronyms should be written within brackets after writing the words in full on first use, e.g., the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation (SAARC). Subsequently only SAARC should be used without brackets.
Dates should be written as October 27, 2014.
Numbers one through ten should be spelled out, unless they are part of arithmetic expression or data are being reported.
Four-digit numbers should be comma separated: 1,000; 1,561,987.
Foreign words should be in italics.
- Headings:
A maximum of three level headings are allowed as following:

First Level Heading

First-level headings are flush left on a separate line. The first text line following is flush left.

Third Level Heading:

Third-level headings are flush left. Third Level Heading: ft. The text follows on the same line.

- Book Reviews: A book review on a book having relevance to academic knowledge and social contribution are welcome and encouraged. Book reviews are also subjected to peer -review like other manuscripts.
- References: Research papers should be based on Footnotes on the pattern of The Chicago Manual of Style. Reference to a book should be followed by the name of the author (s), title of the book, place of publication, publisher, year of publication, and relevant page number. A

Chicago-Style Citation Quick Guide(Cited/Added here for Guidance)

The Chicago Manual of Style presents two basic documentation systems:

(1) notes and bibliography and

(2) author-date. Choosing between the two often depends on subject matter and the nature of sources cited, as each system is favored by different groups of scholars.

The notes and bibliography style is preferred by many in the humanities, including those in literature, history, and the arts. This style presents bibliographic information in notes and, often, a bibliography. It accommodates a variety of sources, including esoteric ones less appropriate to the author-date system.

The author-date system has long been used by those in the physical, natural, and social sciences. In this system, sources are briefly cited in the text, usually in parentheses, by author's last name and date of publication. The short citations are amplified in a list of references, where full bibliographic information is provided.

Aside from the use of notes versus parenthetical references in the text, the two systems share a similar style. Click on the tabs below to see some common examples of materials cited in each style, including examples of common electronic sources. For numerous specific examples, see chapters 14 and 15 of the 16th edition of The Chicago Manual of Style.

Notes and Bibliography: Sample Citations

- The following examples illustrate citations using the notes and bibliography system. Examples of notes are followed by shortened versions of citations to the same source. For more details and many more examples, see chapter 14 of The Chicago Manual of Style. For examples of the same citations using the author-date system, click on the Author-Date tab above.

Article in a newspaper or popular magazine

Newspaper and magazine articles may be cited in running text ("As Sheryl Stolberg and Robert Pear noted in a New York Times article on February 27, 2010, . . .") instead of in a note, and they are commonly omitted from a bibliography. The following examples show the more formal versions of the citations. If you consulted the article online, include a URL; include an access date only if your publisher or discipline requires one. If no author is identified, begin the citation with the article title.

- Website

A citation to website content can often be limited to a mention in the text or in a note (“As of July 19, 2008, the McDonald’s Corporation listed on its website . . .”). If a more formal citation is desired, it may be styled as in the examples below. Because such content is subject to change, include an access date or, if available, a date that the site was last modified.

1. “Google Privacy Policy,” last modified March 11, 2009,

- Blog entry or comment

Blog entries or comments may be cited in running text (“In a comment posted to The Becker-Posner Blog on February 23, 2010, . . .”) instead of in a note, and they are commonly omitted from a bibliography. The following examples show the more formal versions of the citations. There is no need to add pseud. after an apparently fictitious or informal name. (If an access date is required, add it before the URL; see examples elsewhere in this guide.)

- E-mail or text message

E-mail and text messages may be cited in running text (“In a text message to the author on March 1, 2010, John Doe revealed . . .”) instead of in a note, and they are rarely listed in a bibliography. The following example shows the more formal version of a note.

1. John Doe, e-mail message to author, February 28, 2010.

- Item in a commercial database

For items retrieved from a commercial database, add the name of the database and an accession number following the facts of publication. In this example, the dissertation cited above is shown as it would be cited if it were retrieved from ProQuest’s database for dissertations and theses.
